CLAIMS VICTIM OF FIST FIGHT SOUGHT A GUN

Companion of Merle P. Hankey Testifies Latter Threatened Lawrence.

HEARING HELD MONDAY NIGHT

One additional bit of testimony was adduced and one new witness was heard at a preliminary hearing for Chester W. Lawrence, 28, crippled Gettysburg restaurant worker, charged with the murder of Merle P. Hankey, 42, of Gettysburg, before Justice of the Peace John C. Shealer, Monday evening.

At the conclusion of the hearing, at which three witnesses testified, Lawrence was remanded to the Adams county jail, where he has been incarcerated since Sunday, September 22, when Hankey died of an alleged beating at the hands of the cripple.

While most of the testimony was the same as that previously given at a coroner's inquest, Robert McIntyre, South Washington street, who was with Hankey when the alleged fracas took place, testified that Hankey told him after the alleged fight, "I'm going home to get a gun to shoot the —."

Widow Testifies
Hankey's statement, McIntyre, added, was made after the two men were unable to find a policeman in center square. The witness had previously testified that Hankey sought an officer to have Lawrence arrested.

Mrs. Nora B. Hankey, widow of the victim, also testified at the hearing. She told how her husband came home between 1 and 1:30 o'clock, Sunday morning, September 22, bleeding and bruised about the head.

"Chester and I got in a fight and he got the best of me," Mrs. Hankey said her husband told her when she asked him what happened.

She then related how she bathed the blood from her husband's head. She said he then walked into the living room, unassisted, and asked for some aspirin. She got him two aspirin tablets, she said, but he did not take them.

Called Physician
Hankey laid down on a day bed in the living room, and during the night he went to sleep, the witness said.

In the morning, after she and the children tried unsuccessfully to arouse Hankey, the witness said she called Dr. H. M. Hartman. When the physician arrived, Mrs. Hankey said he told her nothing about the seriousness of her husband's condition, and told her to put cold water or ice on his head.

Mrs. Hankey said her children insisted that their father be taken to the Warner hospital, and the ambulance was summoned. The doctor was summoned about 9 o'clock. Mrs. Hankey added, and her husband was taken to the hospital about an hour later.

Doctor Testifies
In cross-examination, Mrs. Hankey said her husband left home about 10:15 o'clock, Saturday evening, to go "down town."

The other witness was Dr. Henry Stewart, pathologist at the Warner hospital, who performed an autopsy on Hankey. He testified that Hankey died of an intra-cranial hemorrhage on the left side of the head, induced by a blow or blows on the right side.

Justice of the Peace Shealer and Corporal A. B. Verbeek, of the state police, examined the witnesses. Franklin R. Bigham, Esq., of Gettysburg, counsel for Lawrence, conducted searching cross-examinations of the witnesses.

SUNDAY FILMS ARE DEFENDED

Philadelphia Minister Urges Liberalism in Religion in Address to Lions.

The Rev. David Colony, headmaster of the Mission Industrial school, Philadelphia, told the Gettysburg Lions' club members, at their regular weekly dinner-meeting, Monday evening, that "Christianity is falling," and decried the lack of liberalism in religion.

He asserted that the reason churches are not filled "is because the people are not spiritually hungry to attend services," and then declared that the reason people are not spiritually hungry is because "preachers and ministers do not make their sermons and services attractive enough to make the people spiritually hungry."

The Rev. Mr. Colony defended Sunday movies at a public hearing before the state legislators last spring.

In his address here Monday evening, the Rev. Mr. Colony said that he does not have any trouble filling his Mission because he makes his service and his sermon so attractive that people "want to participate in the service and are willing to attend, regardless of outside attractions."

The Rev. Mr. Colony further declared that Sunday films will not interfere with Sunday church services if the church services "are of such a nature as to make the people spiritually hungry for the Word of God."

The speaker also declared that blue laws have placed the stamp of "needing police protection to get people to attend church services."

A general discussion followed the address.

Italian Minister Is Ordered to Leave Addis Ababa With Entire Staff.

(Copyright, 1935, By Associated Press) Addis Ababa, Oct. 8 (AP)—An Ethiopian official said today that Italian army on the north was suffering wholesale desertion of its native soldiers.

Ethiopian warriors, meanwhile, massed in the hills south of Addis Ababa confronting the northern Fascist force.

Wild scenes occurred at the Addis Ababa railroad station when American women and children and other foreigners attempted to board the train today for Djibouti, French Somaliland.

The exodus was so great that crowds bidding farewell to their friends became unmanageable.

(By the Associated Press)

Orders Minister to Leave
Emperor Haile Selassie, amassing 750,000 tribal warriors in the field to maintain Ethiopian independence from Mussolini's Fascists, asked the Italian minister today to leave Addis Ababa immediately with his entire staff.

This information was conveyed to the League of Nations by Teclé Hawariate, the Ethiopian delegate.

"The legation," Hawariate said, "is the center of espionage, intrigue and plots against Ethiopia."

The league also was notified of the action of the diplomatic corps at Addis Ababa asking Il Duce to refrain from aerial attacks on the capital and Deridawa, to the east.

As the league—after declaring the Italian Fascist government an outlaw among nations—considered the nature of sanctions to be imposed, it was disclosed in Geneva some powers wished to give Great Britain a mandate to supervise such sanctions.

Troops to Egypt
Shortly afterward, word came of the passage through the Strait of Gibraltar, bound east into the Mediterranean, of the British liner Cameronia with 2,000 troops aboard.

One battalion is bound from the West Indies to Egypt.

For days, in anticipation of any emergency that may arise from the imposition of sanctions, Britain has been strengthening its forces along this "lifeline of the empire."

Some doubts have arisen in London as to the extent of aid England may expect from France in the event of such an emergency.

News and Comment by THE EDITOR

Thousands upon thousands of words of favorable publicity have been published in newspapers and magazines concerning the reunion of the Grand Army of the Republic and the United Confederate Veterans at Gettysburg in 1938.

Not for many, many years—1913 to be exact—has such a movement attracted the attention of reporters, editors and authors, throughout the country. Not one unfavorable word has been written for public print by an editor or a columnist since the opening announcement of the proposed reunion of the two veterans' organizations.

From Boston to Texas and from Virginia to Wisconsin have come clippings of news stories, editorials, magazine articles, etc., all of which loudly acclaim the reunion plan.

In the center of this wave of publicity is historic Gettysburg. Referred to by those who had occasion to write of the reunion, or the deliberations of the veterans before they accepted the official invitation, as a spot known by men, women and children. No effort was made to describe Gettysburg or its significance in American history, the authors of the various pieces taking it for granted that the name of Gettysburg is indelibly written in the minds of all who read.

Of the countless words written about the reunion a few excerpts follow:

From the Christian Science Monitor

"The tramp, tramp of marching veterans uniformed in Blue and Gray on the field of Gettysburg in 1938 will reverberate far beyond the confines of that historic spot . . .

"Although nationwide satisfaction at the crumbling of barriers of prejudice and resentment may be tempered with regret that they took so long to fall, the gain is great. It means looking forward instead of backward . . . Tribute to their magnanimity must not be withheld from the survivors of those strife-torn years. . .

"By their reciprocal gesture of friendly unity these honored veterans are building for the future. . .

"The bugle note that will start the tramp, tramp of marching feet at Gettysburg is already sounding. It calls a nation to attention that a peace unbroken is better than a peace that must be mended."

From the Boston Post

Water Complaints Stir Councilmen; Discuss Purchase

Borough Solicitor Instructed to Study Legal Phases Relative to Acquisition of Company; Some Suggest Reservoir in South Mountains as One Solution of Issue.

MANAGER REPORTS RESERVOIR ON CEMETERY HILL SANITARY

Another effort looking toward acquisition by the borough of the Gettysburg water company was taken at the October meeting of council, Monday evening.

Several councilmen said that within the past few days they had received numerous complaints from residents of Gettysburg about the peculiar taste of Gettysburg's drinking water.

The upshot of the lengthy discussion was that council directed its solicitor, Eugene V. Bulleit, Esq., to study the legal phases by which Gettysburg might acquire the local water company. Mr. Bulleit was directed to report at the next meeting.

Urge Mountain Reservoir
In discussing the acquisition of the water company, councilmen suggested again that a reservoir be constructed in the South Mountains as a works project and that the water be piped here by gravity.

A letter from George W. Naylor, manager of the Gettysburg water company, in reply to one sent by the borough asking that the open reservoir on East Cemetery hill be lined, precipitated the discussion.

THIEVES LOOT DENTAL OFFICE

Get $2 Worth of Gold, Some Stamps and Change From Dentists Here.

Robbers apparently seeking gold entered the offices of two Gettysburg and two Hanover dentists over the week-end. Although the loot here was almost negligible, in Hanover the thieves stole $40 worth of gold from one dentist and an undetermined amount from another.

Here the intruders entered the offices of Dr. C. N. Gitt on the second floor of the Masonic building, center square, and Dr. A. P. Rech, on the second floor of the Murphy building, 27 Baltimore street.

Doctor Gitt's office was entered between 11 p. m., Saturday, and 8 a. m., Monday, stealing one dollar worth of postage stamps. All of Doctor Gitt's gold was in a safe.

At the office of Doctor Rech the thieves took seventy cents worth of stamps, 75 cents in change and about $2 worth of gold from a plate.

In Hanover, the thieves stole gold valued at $400 from the office of Dr. A. Frank Glick and an undetermined quantity of the precious metal from the office of Dr. T. H. Charnbury.

State police expressed the opinion that the robberies were committed by professionals who have been operating in other parts of Pennsylvania.

Italian Minister

An unconfirmed report that the Italians used gas for the first time Monday was relayed to London by the Reuters (British) correspondent at Addis Ababa.

He said this report told of the use of gas in operations around Adowa. The same correspondent said Italian forces captured the Ethiopian holy city of Aksum virtually completing the first stage of their campaign in the north.

Protect Americas

Washington, Oct. 8 (AP).—Seeking to protect Americas in Addis Ababa, the United States has furnished the Italian government with data concerning American establishments there in the hope that an invading aerial army might not drop bombs on property protected by the American flag.

The United States has not specifically requested Italy to refrain from bombing buildings flying the American flag, but Secretary Hull told newsmen the information had been transmitted to Rome.

Hull said Cornelius H. Van Engert, American charge d'affaires, informed the state department he had requested American institutions in Addis Ababa either to fly large American flags or paint a large flag on the roofs of their buildings.

American institutions in the Ethiopian capital, chiefly missionary schools and hospitals, are easily observed from maps of the city, Engert reported, and their bombing could be avoided.

Report Of Casualties

Rome, Oct. 8 (AP).—Italian casualties were described as very few but those of Ethiopians as heavy in an official communique today concerning the war thus far in East Africa.

There was no mention of a resumption of an advance into Ethiopia by the Italians on this sixth day of open hostilities.

The communique, instead, described digging-in operations and reported that "hundreds of prisoners and much war materials were captured in recent days."

MENTAL HOME INMATE KILLS COLLEGE CHUM

Llanfair-Fechan, Wales, Oct. 8 (AP).—A young chemist was battered to death Monday by his most intimate college friend, who was a "non-dangerous" inmate of a local mental home. The slayer, Frederick Carl Victor Koch, was held for murder following an inquest into the death of Ronald Sidney Morgan, who frequently visited the home to take Koch out walking.

Morgan's head was battered with a 28-pound rock while the couple walked along a lonely stretch of seashore. Police said Koch told them: "Twelve months ago he (Morgan) insulted me, so I took him out and just killed him. Haven't you got a cigarette? I killed him with a stone."

BRITAIN URGES WAR PENALTIES

Government Will Work to Invoke Strictest Sanctions Against Italy.

London, Oct. 8 (AP).—Great Britain stands prepared to work at Geneva for the quickest and fullest penalties possible against Italy under Article XVI of the League of Nations covenant, authoritative sources said Monday night.

This nation hopes the other members of the league are prepared to act likewise, these sources said.

Great Britain, far from being awed or frightened by the league council's adoption of a committee indictment against Italy, is ready to do her full part in carrying out the joint responsibilities envisaged by the punitive article of the covenant, it was emphasized.

Yet no one here was willing to predict Monday night just what form Geneva will eventually give to Article XVI.

Can Break Trade Relations The covenant prescribes the breaking of all trade and financial relations and possible prohibition of intercourse between Italy and all other nations of the league.

Responsible persons here believed only the severance of trade and financial relations—would be the first resort. But Great Britain, it was understood, is prepared to insist firmly on action.

To all practical purposes, it was said in informed quarters, financial relations with Italy are already severed. Breaking off of trade relations, without some step to enforce this action, might not affect Italy materially for months—if ever.

Here and There

"The survivors of the Civil War will be too old three years from now to allow rancor to embitter the last reunion at Gettysburg. The two flags waving side by side will typify a united country and a common patriotism."

From the Washington Post:

"It was said in 1898 and again when the World War came along, that there is no more North and South. But anyone who knows anything about the spirit of these tottering old fighters, whose ranks are now so pitifully thin, knows that the Battle of Bull Run will be fought as long as there is a survivor left. None the less it would be an appealing outcome if this Gettysburg reunion could be scheduled in the tactful spirit of the historian who described the Battle of Shiloh as a "Confederate failure but not a Union victory."

(The above editorial was published before the veterans had accepted Gettysburg's and Pennsylvania's invitation to meet here in 1938).

From the Nashville Banner: "Such a meeting would be the final gesture of the nation's unity and it should have the effect of further erasing prejudices that linger seventy years after the Blue and the Gray laid down their arms."

From the Milwaukee Journal:

"We, children's children think it would be a fine thing, a pretty sentiment, to have the Blue and Gray marching, if feebly, shoulder to shoulder. But they want to be sure that their last testimony is to the cause to which their youth was given."

From the Grand Rapids Press:

"The spirit of such a reunion will be the spirit of hate forgotten, of the strife buried. Let Yank and Reb each shake out his old flag. It will quicken the heart of America to see them marching together, a tattered remnant of the brave young host that once stormed the green slopes of that same Gettysburg."

From the Grand Rapids Herald:

"The men of both sides discovered that after all they were very much alike and were all good American citizens and proud of it. I can't see why they should not again meet, at Gettysburg, together, for very soon they all will have met on another field where there will be no roaring of guns, nor spitting of fire, where there will be no animosities but only peace and love and happiness."

From the Philadelphia Ledger:

"We hope the veterans will agree, however. At best, in 1938, there won't be enough left of either to make a good fight. And the Stars and Bars, like the Stars and Stripes, should remind the remnants of both sides that they were flags that stood for high courage—when they were young."

HIGH COURAGE

by Jeanne Bowman

SYNOPSIS: Anne Farnsworth feels the mystery behind her father's sudden trip to his Astoria fish cannery, but is not able to penetrate it. She is further disturbed when her fiancé, Rob Crocker, insults a Finnish boy who rescues her from the river, and objects to her talking to Tecla Sorki, her old nurse. At the Astoria hotel Anne's mother asks whether Rob thanked John Neuman, her rescuer.

Chapter Four HINT FROM MOTHER

"No, mother, he didn't," admitted Anne. "He insisted Neuman merely made a gesture to put Dad under obligation to him. What do you think?"

"I could be arrested for what I think . . . of Rob," Mrs. Farnsworth confessed, laughing. "I don't believe John Neuman had time to identify your boat or you. He saw the need for action and acted; I understand he's like that."

"Well, Rob was jealous, mother," Anne hastened to defend her fiancé. He seemed to object to Neuman's putting his arms about me. I suppose I should be proud that he thinks that much of me, shouldn't I?"

"That's for you to decide," Mrs. Farnsworth evaded. "Well . . . I suppose we should dress for dinner."

"Mother, you're looking forward to this family dinner about as much as I am," accused Anne. "Rob says the Farleys are going to be there."

"They would be," murmured the woman, with her whimsical laugh. "There are times when I rejoice that my relatives are as distant in kin as they are in geography. As much as I love Luke, the two his brother and sister married are all the in-laws I can stand in one lifetime. Not that I'd let him know," she hastened to say. "Lee is still his funny little brother and Mabel, in spite of her girth, a little sister to be cared for."

"I wonder why Rob has never taken me to see his mother and father," Anne mused. "They don't live so far away; live on a farm in the southern part of the state, he says. I'd like to know them; maybe I'd understand him better."

"Daughter," Mrs. Farnsworth arose and came over to Anne, "what do you mean by that? Do you feel you don't know Rob well enough to go on with your marriage?"

It seemed to Anne that her mother's voice was tinged with hope. "No, not that," she hastened to say. "Only I believe that, knowing a person's parents and childhood, you can tell better how they will react to certain trials. I never know how Rob will react in a crisis, like today, for instance."

"Anne," Mrs. Farnsworth leaned over her daughter, dark eyes troubled. "Why not postpone your marriage to Rob until next winter? Will you do that, dear?"

Anne studied her mother in consternation. Put off her wedding with the bridesmaids chosen, the new home they would occupy nearly completed?

"Mother, why do you ask?"

"Oh," Mrs. Farnsworth's mood seemed to change. "Just the desire of a silly old hen with a lone duckling," she explained. "I do want you to be as happy as Dad and I have been, and if you feel any uncertainty at all, I want you to know we wouldn't mind making plausible excuses for you."

Anne laughed in sheer relief. "Don't worry, I'm not uncertain."

"Then we'd better dress. I had Yvonne pack that new coral velvet. Charlotte is piqued if we don't dress for her dinners and jealous if we do, so we might as well give her something to be jealous about."

Anne came flushed and rosy from her bath to find Mrs. Farnsworth had gone to the other room. Methodically the girl brushed her long, golden brown hair, plaited it, then after slipping into the coral velvet, bound the braids about her head.

She studied her image in the mirror, impersonally. In spite of what her mother had said, she wasn't pretty. Her eyes were a nice rich brown but they were set too far apart and her brows were too black for such pale brown hair.

Fortunately she had perfect teeth, for her mouth was generously proportioned. She leaned forward, surveyed the creamy tone of her skin, it wouldn't be long before it was rosy tan, two or three days in the open . . . Neumann was bronzed, and his eyes were sea blue, no, sailor blue.

A blast of wind struck the building and rattled the windows, then walled off around the eaves. The storm was coming in, flaying the trees with long streaks of rain.

Anne walked to the windows and looked out. The river was smothered in darkness. Lights on the wharves flickered blue, and the nearby electric signs smoldered in red and unearthly greens.

"Makes me think of one of Tecla's stories," she mused. "One of those weird nights that blow in on sea-coast towns. Yes?" she spoke aloud, as someone rattled the door knob.

"Oh, Dad, hello," she greeted, opening the door, "and Tecla, come in."

"Mother dressed?" asked Farnsworth, abruptly.

"Yes, Luke," Mrs. Farnsworth, in a dress as silver as her hair, came from the inner room. "What's wrong, dear?" she asked, apprehensively.

"Tecla wants to talk to us," he answered. "Anne, Rob's due in the lobby in a few moments. Go down and meet him and go on to Lee's."

with him And, daughter, it won't be necessary to mention to him, or the others, that Tecla is here with us, will it?"

"No, Dad," she faltered, "not if you don't want it known."

"Good girl run along now. I wish to goodness we didn't have to stop for that meal but I suppose Charlotte would have a fit if we didn't."

"The closed door cut off the explanation which must have followed these words.

Anne threw a long fur cape over her shoulders, discovered a florist's box on the night stand, paused to fasten a spray of gardenias along the lower line of her frock's square neck and then went into the hall.

More mystery from which both she and Rob were excluded, and in which Tecla Sorki, a comparative stranger, was included.

She stepped from the elevator, a regal young figure, chin up, no hint of trouble showing in her eyes, as she walked the few steps to meet Rob. She felt again a thrill of pride in his distinguished appearance.

"We're going on alone," she told him, after thanking him for the gardenias. "Why? Oh, I suppose Dad is having his usual wrangle with his tie. They'll call a cab, so we needn't wait."

TULIPS BLEND READILY IN ANY GARDEN DESIGN

Pleasing Effects Obtained With A Few Types Set Out in Groups of 25.

By GISELA GRIMM

The popularity of the tulip is easily understood. The flowers are large and are available in many gay and lovely colors, making a brilliant display unequalled by any other bulb. Moreover, they are so easily grown that any amateur can succeed with them. By planting both early and late kinds a long period of bloom may be enjoyed. The early singles are often neglected in favor of the taller and later flowering Darwin, Cottage and Breeder tulips.

This is unfortunate, for the early singles are brilliant in color and, flowering in April, are the first tulips to brighten the garden. Among the finest are Pink Beauty, a bright cherry-rose; White Hawk, pure white; Yellow Prince, clear golden-yellow, and General de Wet, a fragrant golden yellow, suffused with orange, which lasts particularly long.

Tulips lend themselves well for bedding work in formal designs. For border planting the most pleasing results are obtained when a few varieties which blend well in color are chosen and planted in groups of twenty-five or more of a variety. Collections of mixed tulips, lovely as they are for cutting, are generally less suitable for border planting.

It is always advisable to order tulip bulbs as early as possible, to secure the cream of the crop. As soon as received, they should be unpacked and stored in a dry, well-ventilated, frost-proof place until planting time. Tulips should not be planted too early or top growth will develop in the fall, only to freeze later. However, they should be planted in time to permit them to make the good root growth, so necessary for fine flowers, before the ground freezes. October is a suitable planting month in the northern states.

Detroit Wins Its First World Baseball Pennant

Navin Field, Detroit, Oct. 8 (AP).—Leon Allen Goslin, an amiable New Jersey farmer known far and wide as "Goose," struck the $50,000 blow Monday that carried Detroit's Tigers to their first world championship in a slugger, rip-roaring finish to the baseball wars of 1935.

With the score tied, two out and Manager Mickey Cochrane on second base in the last half of the ninth inning, the Goose produced the golden base hit, a line single over the head of Billy Herman, star second baseman of the Chicago Cubs, that brought Cochrane home with the deciding run.

Bridges' Second Triumph
Goslin's winning hit off Larry French, Cub southpaw, gave Detroit a 4-3 victory in the sixth game, and carried them to triumph in the series by a margin of four games to two and enabled slim Tommy Bridges, curveball right-hander, to achieve his second pitching conquest after a thrilling struggle.

Coming after a brilliant stand by Bridges, who stopped the Cubs cold in their half of the ninth after Stan Hack had opened with a triple to deepest center, the Goose's wallop touched off one of the wildest hometown demonstrations any world series has witnessed since Walter Johnson pitched the Washington Senators to victory over the New York Giants at the nation's capital in 1924.

Third Largest Series Gate
The biggest crowd that has ever seen a ball game in Detroit, 48,420 roaring fans who contributed to the seventh million-dollar "gate" in world series history and the third largest of all, poured out on the field the moment that Cochrane crossed the plate, well ahead of Frank Demaree's futile throw in the general direction of home.

On the same field where they laid down a barrage of fruit and vegetables the year before, as the Cardinals were knocking the ears off the home side, the Tiger bleachers swarmed to the diamond and started a terrible uproar that lasted for hours and was continued, far into the night, in all parts of the city. The crowd's surge nearly crushed Goslin as he tried to make his way toward the gates. Finally, with six bluecoats as an escort, the Goose managed to work his way across the diamond, clutching his hat, grinning and waving a final salute to his hero-worshippers as he escaped through a side exit.

It was a highly exciting and dramatic climax to Detroit's long quest for the world championship of professional baseball. It was the first Tiger triumph in five attempts. Four times since the modern interleague warfare began officially in 1905 Detroit has had its pennant winner turned back by national league rivals. Twice the Cubs turned the trick, in 1907 and 1908. The Pirates followed suit in 1909. Last year the city's first championship club in twenty-five years was beaten back on its home grounds by the Gas House gang of St. Louis in a seven-game thriller after returning home with a 3-2 lead.

GERALD WALKER (right) comments: "Camels make such a mild, tasty smoke."

Here's GOSLIN (above): Says "the Goose": "I switched to Camels long ago. Camels are milder."

ELDEN AUER (left), SCHOOLBOY ROWE (next to Elden), ALVIN CROWDER (next to Schoolboy) agree with TOMMY BRIDGES (right), who says: "I smoke Camels because I can smoke as many as I like. Camels don't affect my wind or give me jumpy nerves."

COSTLIER TOBACCOS

I ALSO THINK THAT CAMELS ARE MILD... BETTER FOR STEADY SMOKING

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS... Turkish and Domestic... than any other popular brand.

And Jacob said unto Laban, Give me my wife, for my days are fulfilled, that I may go in unto her.

And Laban gathered together all the men of the place, and made a feast.

And it came to pass in the evening, that he took Leah his daughter, and brought her to him;
and he went in unto her.

And Laban gave unto his daughter Leah Zilpah his maid for a handmaid.

And it came to pass, that in the morning, behold, it was Leah:
and he said to Laban, What is this thou hast done unto me? didst not I serve with thee for Rachel?
wherefore then has thou beguiled me?

And Laban said, It must be so done in our country, to give the younger before the firstborn.

Fulfill her week, and we will give thee this also for the service which thou shalt serve with me yet seven other years.

And Jacob did so, and fulfilled her week; and he gave him Rachel his daughter to wife also.

And Laban gave to Rachel his daughter Bilhah his handmaid to be her maid.

And he went in also unto Rachel, and he loved also Rachel more than Leah, and served with him yet seven other years.

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams

BEAUTY INEXHAUSTIBLE

THE one world in which we live is inexhaustible. The wisest has only gathered its fragments to himself. But each of us formulates a world of our own, and to us it is unique. It is boundless and limitless in scope.
Its beauty is inexhaustible.

The only world that we live, however, is the one which enters our senses and which suggests to us our form and style of life and which creates the philosophy by which we live.

The most powerful factor in life is beauty. It influences human life more than any other and its evidences are all about us. All nature is its source. The perfectly formed leaves of the trees. The exquisite designs of all flowers. The lovely crystals that form the numberless flakes that cover the earth with white snow. The metals that sleep so tightly in the earth, until awakened by the hand and genius of man. The grass upon which we tread nearly every day. The blue sky, the stars at night. The moon, the sun. The wind and rain. The forest. The mountains. The rivers and the sea. Who can take one breath without a new vision of beauty being presented?

Man merely imitates. In our furniture, our rugs, our curtains, our architecture, our books, our lamps—name what you will—the inexhaustible sources of beauty in nature furnish the key and the motif.
He is the happiest into whose heart and consciousness beauty has entered most.

We all work best in a beautiful environment. We are influenced by beauty to a greater degree than we ever imagine. One's sense of beauty expands and is enlarged as the eye is trained to appreciate beauty.

Beauty is everywhere and endless. On my work desk is a small gray stone that is smooth and round. It sparkles in the sunlight. Just a simple stone picked up at the seashore. Years of polishing from the waves, and contact with other stones, gave it its beauty.

Beauty is so inexhaustible that we pass much of it unnoticed. Ever will it remain, however. Ever will it inspire. And it is free to the poorest.
Tie to that one who loves the simplest creations of beauty.

CHILDREN; OLD FOLKS

When children do as they are told,
They're very nice to have about.
But it airtsurbs their grandfolks out
To have them racing in and out.

The grandmas think the little girls
Like dainty ladies ought to be.
With hair arranged in lovely curls
And frocks and stockings fit to see.

The grandpas think the little boys Should thoughtful of their elders be
And never make the slightest noise
When mother's having company.

But this I think, if children were Always to do as they are told,
Should such an awful thing occur,
They'd be as solemn as the old.

And when I see a girl or lad
With manners overly refined,
I always think it is too bad
A child should have so old a mind.

Father Admits
He Killed Son

Scranton, Oct. 8 (AP).—A plea of guilty to a charge of murder was entered in the Lackawanna county court Monday by Robert Williams, 65, retired miner.

The court will hear testimony next week to fix the degree of the crime and to pass sentence.

Williams shot and killed his son,
Richard Williams, 36, in their home at Old Forge in June.

The elder Williams, police said, had been drinking and when the son attempted to reprimand him
the father shot him.

An alumni get-together will be held at West Point, New York, preceding the Gettysburg-Army football game Saturday it has been announced by Charles W. Beacham, alumni secretary of Gettysburg college. The informal gathering will be held at Hotel Thayer, West Point, Saturday noon. Mr. Beacham states that approximately 75 alumni from the New York district have responded to letters sent out by him indicating they will attend the game and reunion. U. S. Military academy officials are reserving a section of seats immediately behind the Gettysburg bench for Orange and Blue rooters but have notified Mr.
Beacham that the number of seats to be reserved in this group must be sent to them in advance. All local fans who wish to secure seats in this section are urged to get in touch with Mr. Beacham within the next few days. Admission to the game will be $1.10.

BALTIMORE (Union Stock Yards) Receipts of live stock yesterday approximated 1,300 cattle and about 300 head from last week-end. Calves totaled 400. Hogs 725 and calves 1,750. Receipts and holdovers included live stock that were received for the seventh annual live-stock show, which starts today.

Cattle—In the commercial cattle supply the quality and finish of animals was either plain from a slaughter standpoint. Many lots carried fairly good quality from the standpoint of stocker and feeder cattle and much of the crop found outlet through those channels. Trading started rather slowly and reached a moderately active stage. Some of the restrictions making for a slow start were division of at-

MOUNT SEEKS "SECOND WIN"

Sunday's Victory, First Since 1933, Spurs Mount St. Mary's Grid Eleven.

With their victory over Canisius on Sunday, the first since 1933, safely in hand, members of the Mt. St. Mary's college football squad today began active preparations for their second game of the season on Saturday when they meet the University of Delaware in Newark.

Considerably enthused over the work of his inexperienced team in their game Sunday Coach Lawler began correcting the faults made evident by the team's play Sunday. Lawler stated that these were surprisingly few in view of the greenness of his men.

Saturday's game will be a real test for the Mountainers. Delaware has been undefeated in two games, both of which showed them to possess considerable power and ability. With both elevens striving to maintain perfect slates the contest should prove interesting.

Lawler will make no changes in his line-up, using the same 11 men who started against Canisius. Corning Smyth, proving himself a sterling field general, will again occupy the quarterback position for the Mount.

TO BRING BACK TRAIN CAUGHT IN HURRICANE

Miami, Fla., Oct. 3 (AP)—Florida East Coast railway officials Monday said 400 or 500 men would be put to work next week, recovering "the train that didn't come back."

The train, locomotive and eleven cars, was sent from Miami into the hurricane-threatened Florida keys.

Lawler will make no changes in his line-up, using the same 11 men who started against Canisius. Corning Smyth, proving himself a sterling field general, will again occupy the quarterback position for the Mount.

Monday the eleven cars lay sprawled along the track on Islamorada. A $25,000 fund has been set aside by the receivers, Scott M. Loffin and William R. Keenan, to rebuild the track from north of Tavernier to Islamorada and salvage the train.

Mrs. Stoll Tells for First Time
Her Story of $50,000 Abduction

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 8 (AP).—Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, Louisville society matron, took the witness stand in federal court Monday to tell for the first time the story of her abduction and six days' imprisonment for $50,000 ransom, and to identify a photograph of Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., as a likeness of her abductor.

Testifying in the kidnapping trial of Mrs. Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., and Thomas H. Robinson, Sr., wife and father of the alleged abductor, Mrs. Stoll told how her head bled 24 hours from a long gash, opened when the man hit her with an iron pipe in her struggle for his gun.

She also declared he repeatedly threatened her with death and stood over her while she wrote notes to her husband, her friends and Thomas H. Robinson, Sr., whom he had named as intermediary to receive the ransom.

The kidnap victim testified with composure, answering readily in a clear voice. Her mother, Mrs. William Shallcross Speed, entered the federal courtroom here when her daughter was called and throughout the examination seemed more perturbed than the witness.

Mrs. Speed fingered the buttons of her smartly-cut black frock. Her eyes never left Mrs. Stoll's face, except for an occasional glance at the defendants.

Oldham Clark, assistant United States district attorney, questioned the government witness. Federal Judge Elwood Hamilton twice rebuked him for leading questions, addressed to Mrs. Stoll. Under his questions Mrs. Stoll related that she "was feeling badly" on the afternoon of October 10, 1934; that she removed her dress and put on a dressing gown and went to bed.

She said she heard a car drive up and heard a man tell the maid, Mrs. Ann Woollet, he had come to repair the telephone, and later heard the man ostensibly talk to the telephone company. She said Mrs. Woollet asked her to leave her bedroom so the repairman could check the extension there. She continued:

"He came up and entered the guest room where I was and told me he was going to kidnap me. He held a gun right in my face. I tried to think of arguments because I knew it would not do me any good to yell. . . ."

"The man laid his gun on the bed and tied my wrists. I made a grab for the gun and he hit me on the head with a pipe. It raised quite a bump."

She identified as the kidnapper's weapon a bulky section of pipe about 14 inches long and two inches thick.

"I remembered that my own gun was in my bedroom," Mrs. Stoll resumed, "and I tried to get to it, and he hit me again."

"He cut my head. It bled for 24 hours."

Mrs. Stoll identified a bedspread as the one from her bed. She subsequently identified a similarly stained pillow slip, a piece of wire used in binding her and tape used to stop her mouth.

She said the kidnapper told her if her husband, Berry V. Stoll, C. C. Stoll Oil company executive, came home he would kill him.

"I knew that he would, so I was anxious to leave," she testified. She said she was thrown into the bottom of the kidnap car, covered with newspapers and a blanket and driven for several hours. She said her suffering was extreme.

Department of Commerce reports show 500,000 horses under saddle and stabled in the United States today, a total twice that of 20 years ago.
